On Tuesday, May 27, students and family gathered in the Senior Lounge for a night to celebrate extra curricular participation in the academic fields. The ACE Foundation celebrated a year in sponsoring academic clubs with its annual ACE banquet. Through fundraisers and on a volunteer basis, the ACE Foundation was formed to help sponsor academic extracurriculars.

The clubs and activities invited that night included a wide range of students from Trillium editors to Robotics Team members. Each club was represented by its members and advisors in order to honor the students and communally thank the ACE Foundation for its support. First Selectman Ray Baldwin and six of the seven members of the Trumbull Board of Education were in attendance. With such a successful turnout, the night became an experience to share the success stories of these extracurriculars.

The evening became an encompassing production with a video montage of all the clubs, speeches by committee members as well, and a dinner catered by Vazzy's. The evening lasted for almost three hours, but Doctor Tremaglio assumed a new name as he closed the ceremony: "Dr. Brevity," he called himself. Of all the people in the room, Doctor Tremaglio had the widest view of the student body and its close operations. He was able to speak formally and briefly on his observations, as he spoke about the "family" essence of the cooperation in the ACE Foundation.

The ACE Foundation hopes to continue raising money for Trumbull high School clubs as the gathering on the 27th ended on this particular note. The ACE Foundation is fairly new, but hopes to expand its reach in order to benefit the Trumbull High school community each year.
