

THE TRUMBULL TIMES, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 2010

United Nations club attends Yale conference

The Trumbull High School Model United Nations club and their adviser, Beth Gilman, attended the high school conference at Yale University the weekend of January 22. students, Gulrukh Haroon and Ryan McEniry, were assigned to the specialized committee, the International Court of Justice.

While at Yale, the students debated issues representing their assigned nations including Afghanistan, Israel and India. The students focused on topics ranging from the Afghan drug trade to food security in developing nations. Two of the

The two students completed an application process to be a part of this respected committee where they focused on the legitimacy of the Kosovo Declaration of Independence.

“It was an excellent experience for all students involved in the conference,” Gilman said.

Trumbull High School student Brendan Lewis was awarded an Honorable Mention for his role on Disarmament and International Security Committee. Trumbull High was the only public school in Connecticut to receive an award.