

With a redesigned website and the addition of video announcements on A and C days, THS incorporated more technology into students' school lives. Accustomed to being ever-connected, these changes enabled students to stay current with the daily happenings at THS.

After more than six months of hard work, the Web Team launched a new website. The upgrades allow students, faculty and parents access to accurate and regularly updated information, including daily bulletins and video announcements. Spearheaded by webmaster Ben Woessner, graphic designer Nicole Mihalko and adviser Catherine Larson, the revamped site is easier to navigate, and it also features an animated photo slide show.

For the first time in years, the THS audio visual department offered Eagles ten-minute live video announcements produced in-house. Delivered through a more relevant medium than the antiquated PA system, students paid closer attention to the daily bulletin.

In addition to reporting upcoming school events and activities, the Eagle News Network also featured local weather reports and information about school sports. Some episodes contained humorous commercials advertising the school store, after school activities and clubs. Produced and directed by Jonathan Mark, the morning announcement crew featured more than 20 dedicated individuals. This strong team allowed video announcements to become a new part of the THS experience.

"Through Channel 17, faculty and students, the morning announcements broadcast on TV became a reality."
